Turkey pushes offensive in Syria, despite sanctions and calls to stop

Syrian border towns have been the hardest hit.

Turkey pressed ahead with its offensive in northern Syria on Tuesday despite U.S. sanctions and growing calls for it to stop, while Syria's Russia-backed army moved on the key city of Manbij that was abandoned by U.S. forces in Donald Trump's retreat.

Reuters journalists accompanied Syrian government forces who entered the center of Manbij, a flashpoint where U.S. troops had previously conducted joint patrols with Turkey.

Russian and Syrian flags were flying from a building on the city outskirts, and from a convoy of military vehicles.

Russia's Interfax news agency, citing Moscow's Defense Ministry, said later that Syrian forces had taken control of an area of more than 1,000 square kilometers around Manbij. This included Tabqa military airfield, two hydroelectric power plants and several bridges across the Euphrates river, it said.

Trump's unexpected decision to withhold protection from Syria's Kurds after a phone call with Turkish President Tayyip Erdogan a week ago swiftly upended five years of U.S. policy in the Middle East.

The withdrawal gives a free hand to Washington's adversaries in the world's deadliest ongoing war, namely Syrian President Bashar al-Assad and his Russian and Iranian allies.

The United States announced on Sunday it was withdrawing its entire force of 1,000 troops from northern Syria. Its former Kurdish allies immediately forged a new alliance with Assad's government, inviting the army into towns across the breadth of their territory.

In Manbij, Syrian troops were manning joint checkpoints alongside regional Kurdish militia (YPG), witnesses said.

A YPG official said

The United States announced on Sunday it was withdrawing its entire force of 1,000 troops from northern Syria.

Turkish-backed fighters were still 15 km north of the city. Turkey's state-owned Anadolu agency said six civilians were killed and 13 wounded in three villages near the town of Jarablus in a YPG attack launched from north of Manbij.

A Reuters cameraman on the Turkish frontier reported heavy bombardment on Tuesday morning of the Syrian border town of Ras al Ain where an SDF spokesman reported a fierce battle going on.

Trump announced a set of sanctions on Monday to punish Ankara, and on Tuesday a senior U.S. official said Washington would threaten more sanctions to persuade Turkey to reach a ceasefire and halt its offensive.

The measures announced on Monday – mainly a hike in steel tariffs and a pause in trade talks – were less robust than financial markets had anticipated, and Trump's critics derided them as too feeble to have an impact.

The Turkish lira, which had fallen on the expectation of tougher U.S. measures, recovered after the sanctions were announced, as did its bond and stock markets, with traders noting that Trump had spared Turkish banks.

Bilateral trade between Turkey and the United States is relatively small - around a tenth the size of Turkey's trade with Europe. Washington's most effective form of economic leverage would be to hinder Turkey's access to U.S. financial markets, a step Trump has so far avoided.

In a potentially more damaging blow, German carmaker Volkswagen said it was postponing a final decision on whether to build a 1 billion euro ($1.1 billion) plant in Turkey, citing concern over "current developments" after international condemnation of the incursion.

Following Trump's announcement, the U.S. Treasury said on Monday it had sanctioned Turkey's energy, defense and interior ministers, as well as the ministries of energy and defense.

Trump has defended his reversal of U.S. policy as part of a plan to extricate the United States from "endless" wars in the Middle East.

But his critics, including senior figures in his own Republican Party, cast it as a betrayal of the Kurds, loyal allies who lost thousands of fighters as the principal ground forces in Washington's battle against IS.

The Kurdish YPG militia, the key component of the forces who fought IS, is seen by Ankara as a terrorist group aligned with Kurdish separatist insurgents in Turkey.

The United Nations says 160,000 people have fled their homes as Turkish forces advance. The regional Kurdish administration puts the number of displaced at 270,000.

The U.N. Human Rights office said on Tuesday Turkey could be held responsible for war crimes by fighters under its direction. REUTERS

Pence declines to share documents with House

2 Vice President Mike Pence declined on Tuesday to submit documents to the House of Representative committees pursuing an impeachment inquiry of President Donald Trump, his office said, calling the probe "self-proclaimed" and the requests for information too broad. Pence joins Donald Trump's personal lawyer, Rudy Giuliani, in refusing to cooperate with the investigation. Pence's counsel, Matthew Morgan, said in a letter to three Democratic lawmakers that the scope of documents requested included some "which are clearly not vice-presidential records." The White House considers the Democratic-led House's impeachment process to be unfair and without due process. REUTERS

Cuba Gooding Jr. pleads not guilty to buttock pinching

4 Actor Cuba Gooding Jr. pleaded not guilty on Tuesday to pinching a woman's buttocks in a nightclub last October, four months after he was charged with groping a woman in a separate incident. Manhattan prosecutors said Gooding pinched the woman at Manhattan's Tao nightclub after making a sexually suggestive remark to her earlier in the evening, and denied it when she confronted him. Gooding was accused in June of touching a woman's breasts at the Magic Hour Rooftop Bar in Manhattan, a charge he has denied. Both alleged incidents are part of the same criminal case. He is charged with one count of forcible touching and one count of sexual abuse, which are misdemeanors, in connection with each alleged incident. REUTERS

Woman killed kids and man before shooting herself

28-year-old woman survives suicide attempt after killing her family.

BECCA GLASSER-BAKER
Rebecca.Glasser@metro.us

Monday night, a woman shot and killed her two young daughters and the man she was involved with before attempting to take her own life in Northeast Philly.

NBC reported that the incident occurred in the 6300 block of Hegerman Street in the Tacony neighborhood.

At around 9:50 p.m., a neighbor called the police after reporting gunfire coming from the home, NBC reports.

ABC reported that a 28-year-old woman, now identified as Damyrra Jones Alcindor, allegedly shot her 38-year-old husband, Max Alcindor, her 4-year-old daughter Maxilla, and her 10-month-old daughter Damaya. The man who was shot was allegedly the father of one of the girls.

The man died on the scene, but both of the children were alive and brought to the St. Christopher's Hospital for Children, where they later died.

Philadelphia Police Acting Commissioner Christine Coulter told outlets that it is "clearly tragic that there were children involved in this. It's never easy seeing a child with a gunshot wound. The officers who responded blocked every intersection on the way to the hospital, doing everything they could in an effort to help save their lives." Coulter also mentioned how some officers that were on the scene cried.

The lone survivor is Alcindor. Reports say that she was found outside the home on top of the gun. Officials have described the incident as a murder-suicide.

ABC reports that Alcindor confessed to the shooting while in the ambulance on her way to the hospital.

> "Clearly tragic that there were children involved in this. It's never easy seeing a child with a gunshot wound."

The woman was taken to Frankford Torresdale Hospital and she is in critical condition. Outlets report that she was undergoing tests on Tuesday morning.

It has not been made clear where in the home the shooting took place. There is also no word on what sparked the incident, but it was reported by multiple outlets that police had not been to the home before.

Homicide Captain Jason Smith told ABC that Alcindor purchased the gun legally prior to the shooting.

At this time, the investigation is ongoing.

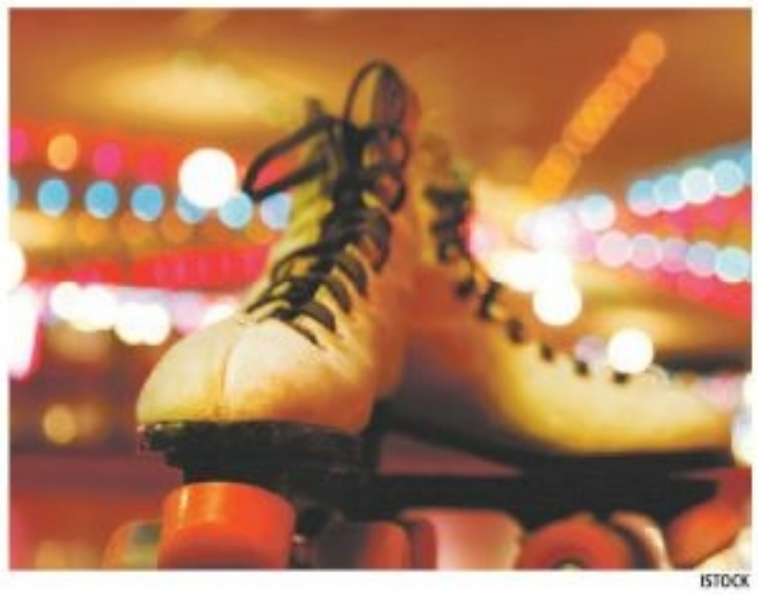
Hundreds of teens disrupt northeast Philly boulevard by leaving skating rink



ISTOCK

At least four people were arrested after hundreds of teens were exiting a free roller skating event. Three teens were arrested for disorderly contact; the fourth person was arrested for allegedly throwing rocks at police cars.

It was reported that there was a free skating night event that took place at Rolling Thunder Skating Rink, which is located on the 7200 block of Roosevelt Boulevard, and police were not notified, NBC reported.

The crowd was so massive, a lot of the teens were pushed out of the rink and started to walk down the boulevard. Some of the teens started to chase each other around, causing a bit of chaos.

Philadelphia Police Deputy Commissioner Joe Sullivan told NBC, "Initially they were calm, but as more juveniles got pushed out of the roller rink, they started jumping in cars and conducting themselves in other types of disorderly behavior."

NBC reported that around 60 officers responded to the scene.

> "Initially they were calm, but as more juveniles got pushed out of the roller rink, they started jumping in cars and conducting themselves in other types of disorderly behavior."

Although one police car was damaged, no other vehicles or properties were damaged. Even though there were no major issues, officers reported that a few businesses in the area had to be shut down. It was reported by multiple outlets that the McDonald's at Cottman Avenue and Roosevelt Boulevard and the Wawa at Tyson Avenue and Roosevelt Boulevard were closed down due to the crowd.

It was also reported that there were no major injuries. However, NBC reported that one teen maced another. BECCA GLASSER-BAKER

Actress Felicity Huffman reports to prison for part in U.S. college scandal

REUTERS

"Desperate Housewives" star Felicity Huffman reported to a federal prison in California on Tuesday to begin serving a 14-day sentence for her role in a vast U.S. college admissions cheating scandal.

The one-time Academy Award nominee, 56, turned herself in to authorities at the Federal Correctional Institution in Dublin, California, her spokesman said in a statement.

U.S. District Judge Indira Talwani had sentenced her to serve two weeks behind bars after Huffman pleaded guilty to conspiracy related to her payment of $15,000 to have someone secretly correct answers on her daughter Sophia's SAT college entrance test.

"Ms. Huffman is prepared to serve the term of imprisonment Judge Talwani ordered as one part of the punishment she imposed for Ms. Huffman's actions," her spokesman said in the statement.

"She will begin serving the remainder of the sentence Judge Talwani imposed one year of supervised release, with conditions including 250 hours of community service – when she is released."

Huffman is among 52 people charged with participating in a wide-ranging scheme in which wealthy parents engaged in a bribery and fraud scheme with a California college admissions consultant to get their children into top colleges, including Yale and Stanford. REUTERS

Trump lawyer Giuliani was paid $500,000 to consult on indicted associate's firm

Federal prosecutors continue to investigate Giuliani.

President Donald Trump's personal attorney, Rudy Giuliani, was paid $500,000 for work he did for a company co-founded by the Ukrainian-American businessman arrested last week on campaign finance charges, Giuliani told Reuters on Monday.

The businessman, Lev Parnas, is a close associate of Giuliani and was involved in his effort to investigate Trump's political rival, former Vice President Joe Biden, who is a leading contender for the 2020 Democratic Party nomination.

Giuliani said Parnas' company, Boca Raton-based Fraud Guarantee, whose website says it aims to help clients "reduce and mitigate fraud", engaged Giuliani Partners, a management and security consulting firm, around August 2018.

Giuliani said he was hired to consult on Fraud Guarantee's technologies and provide legal advice on regulatory issues.

Federal prosecutors are "examining Giuliani's interactions" with Parnas and another Giuliani associate, Igor Fruman, who was also indicted on campaign finance charges, a law enforcement source told Reuters on Sunday.

The New York Times reported last week that Parnas had told associates he paid Giuliani hundreds of thousands of dollars for what Giuliani said was business and legal advice. Giuliani said for the first time on Monday that the total amount was $500,000.

Giuliani told Reuters the money came in two payments made within weeks of each other. He said he could not recall the dates of the payments. He said most of the work he did for Fraud Guarantee was completed in 2018 but that he had been doing follow-up for over a year.

Parnas and Fruman were arrested at Dulles Airport outside Washington last week on charges they funneled foreign money to unnamed U.S. politicians in a bid to influence U.S.-Ukraine relations in violation of U.S. campaign finance laws. The men were preparing to board a plane to Europe.

According to an indictment unsealed by U.S. prosecutors, an unidentified Russian businessman arranged for two $500,000 wires to be sent from foreign bank accounts to a U.S. account controlled by Fruman in September and October 2018. The money was used, in part, by Fruman, Parnas and two other men charged in the indictment to gain influence with U.S. politicians and candidates, the indictment said.

Foreign nationals are prohibited from making contributions and other expenditures in connection with U.S. elections, and from making contributions in someone else's name.

> "I know beyond any doubt the source of the money is not any questionable source"
> Rudy Giuliani

Giuliani said he was confident that the money he received was from "a domestic source," but he would not say where it came from.

"I know beyond any doubt the source of the money is not any questionable source," he told Reuters in an interview. "The money did not come from foreigners. I can rule that out 100%," he said.

He declined to say whether the money had been paid directly to him by Fraud Guarantee or from another source. REUTERS

Google unveils Pixel 4 phones with radar, more affordable laptop

Major release of company hardware.

Google unveiled new Pixel smartphones with higher quality cameras, a radar sensor to track hand gestures and faster virtual assistant on Tuesday, but the devices had no surprise features to set them apart from rivals and nix concerns about price.

The Pixel 4 phones, in two sizes, headlined a New York press event at which Google also announced its first moderately priced laptop, first wireless earbuds and upgrades to its to well-reviewed Wifi router and burger-sized smart speaker.

Google started developing hardware about four years ago, wagering that it could introduce artificial intelligence into devices faster and better than rivals and that consumers would clamor for such features.

The strategy has generated mixed results. But the world's largest search company is pushing forward, not wanting to cede ground to Amazon.com Inc, Facebook Inc and other competitors which are investing in hardware to make users spend more time on their services.

Google's lower-priced devices have been top sellers, but are far from being major profit drivers. Higher-priced devices, such as the Pixel phones, have gained little traction versus those of industry leaders such as Samsung Electronics Co and Apple Inc because of limited marketing and stiff competition. Consumers are also holding on to their devices for much longer.

People are "starting to look for more affordable smartphone options instead of going for a high-end, premium smartphones for (over) $800," said Maurice Klaehne, a devices analyst at technology market researcher Counterpoint.

That has been good news for the Pixel 3a, which launched in May starting at $399, he said. It will remain available in the dozen countries such as Japan and Germany where the Pixel 4 will go on sale. India, where the Pixel 3a is on sale, has yet to approve the Pixel 4's radar chip.

The Pixel 3a boosted Google's smartphone sales to 4.1 million in the first half of 2019, compared to 4.7 million for all of 2018, technology research company IDC said. Still, Google accounted for under 1% of smartphones shipped during the second quarter, according to IDC.

Google's product rollouts have been slow and deliberate, but the company has said that just having the devices in the market has been good for its brand.

The fourth-generation Pixel starts at $799 for a 5.7-inch (14.5-cm) display and $899 for a 6.3-inch display, and for the first time all four major U.S. wireless carriers will offer the smartphones, beginning Oct. 24. REUTERS

Brexit deal within reach in last-ditch talks, but doubts remain

Tensions heighten as Oct. 31 deadline approaches.

REUTERS

Britain and the EU made headway on Tuesday in last-ditch talks on a Brexit deal ahead of a leaders' summit, but with just hours left to clinch an agreement it was still unclear if London could avoid postponing its scheduled departure on Oct. 31.

Officials and diplomats involved in negotiations over the acrimonious divorce between the world's fifth-largest economy and its biggest trading bloc said that differences over the terms of the split had narrowed significantly.

However, the European Union's Brexit negotiator, Michel Barnier, made clear at a meeting of the bloc's ministers in Luxembourg that if an agreement couldn't be reached on Tuesday, it would be too late to send anything for leaders to approve at a summit in Brussels on Thursday and Friday.

That could force another extension of the date for the UK's split from the 27 other member states, the third since Britons voted in a June 2016 referendum to quit the EU.

Britain's plan to leave the EU, which has only ever added new member states, has compounded problems for a bloc torn by euroscepticism, economic disparities and an influx of migrants.

Britain has itself been polarized bitterly by Brexit and, even though an end-game appears to be in sight, the country is still intractably divided between leavers and remainers.

Technical talks in Brussels on the terms of Britain's exit went into the evening on Tuesday after word emerged several hours earlier that gaps on an agreement had narrowed and the two sides were close to agreeing on a text.

One EU official said an agreement was "close but not 100% certain", adding "there are still parts that need to be nailed down". Others were more cautious: one senior EU official said it was "way too premature" to conclude that a deal was at hand.

Sterling surged to its highest level against the dollar and the euro since May on rising hopes for a deal. The main sticking point in talks has been the border between EU member Ireland and the British province of Northern Ireland, and how to prevent the border becoming a backdoor into the EU's single market without erecting controls which could undermine the 1998 peace agreement. Let's go to the movies

The 28th Annual Philadelphia Film Festival kicks off this week.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

ISTOCK

Roll out the red carpet and pop some popcorn, the 28th Annual Philadelphia Film Festival kicks off this week. Throughout the years, the PFF has featured incredible films from award-winning dramas to interesting foreign picks to highly anticipated star-studded selections and more. This year is no different — in fact, it's actually elevated. On top of 120 incredible films, the PFF will also hold galas, feature incredible talent, highlight curated packages and even offer free tickets. Whether you're a film buff, avid moviegoer or just a curious mind, this intoxicating extravaganza is truly an event that cannot be missed.

With a massive amount of film selections out there, it can be hard to fathom just how each category and film is picked. That's where Executive Director J. Andrew Greenblatt and Artistic Director Michael Lerman come in, along with a screening team.

"We spend about a year scouring looking for submissions. We go to other film festivals, have conversations with people we know, see things on the internet and keep track of things that we see going on in the film world and try to see as much as possible," says Lerman. "On top of that, we take blind submissions and they get watched by the screening team and watched by the programmers. We have a lot of discussions and finally, we decide what's going to make the final cut."

With so many selections at the PFF, both Greenblatt and Lerman know that choosing which screening to attend can be a bit overwhelming, but the volume is not by any means a sway away from attending.

"I always encourage people to check out the whole program," says Greenblatt. "I know it's intimidating and 120 films are a lot to get through. But the reason we make the program guide free and accessible is because we want you to read all about these films. I would say if there is any singular one that you respond to, go to that film. We picked these films because we loved them all and we think they should be shown here."

There are 14 categories to choose from ranging from, including "Spotlights" (this year's highly anticipated films), "Filmadelphia" (showcasing talent from the greater Philadelphia area), "After Hours" (highlighting creepy, eerie cult classics in the making), "From the Vaults" (classic films) and more. When asked which categories he would recommend to first-time festival goers, Lerman suggested "Spotlights" to experience some star-studded films and "World View" because, "It's essentially the peak of what we're doing."

A few of the bigger films will also coincide with galas, another tradition at the PFF. Films in the "Galas" category include: "Just Mercy," "The Irishman," "Jojo Rabbit," "Harriet," "Marriage Story," "Motherless Brooklyn," "The Two Popes," and "Waves."

"Some of the biggest films we want to highlight, either because of the level of talent in them or the quality of them. They are tenfold at our festival," says Lerman. "It varies from movies like "Waves" which was one of the best-reviewed movies of the year, to "Marriage Story" which is a great and very moving tale of divorce and custody starring Scarlett Johansson and Adam Driver, to the Closing Night Gala film "Knives Out" which is a fun comedic murder mystery with Daniel Craig, Chris Evans, Michael Shannon and Jamie Lee Curtis — just a massive all-star cast. They are the biggest pieces of the whole puzzle."

Opening Night for the "Galas" category features Destin Daniel Cretton's "Just Mercy." The powerful film follows the life of social justice lawyer Bryan Stevenson (Michael B. Jordan) whose quest to free innocent incarcerated inmates from Death Row is the focal point. According to the release, Bryan Stevenson, who authored the book on which the film is based, screenwriter Andrew Lanham and star Karan Kendrick are scheduled to attend.

"We try to make it very clear when and where we will have guests because we know that is part of the fun of the festival. We bring in as many as possible," says Greenblatt.

A full list of participating talent attending the festival, including Philadelphia 76ers star Ben Simmons, is posted on the festival's official website.

The other Opening Night film is "Parasite" in the "Masters of Cinema" category.

Closing Night Festivities (Oct. 25) will highlight Rian Johnson's outlandish mystery film "Knives Out," which also stars Ana de Armas, Toni Collete, and Don Johnson. Rian Johnson is scheduled to attend the festivities.

"Opening and closing nights are the two biggest nights of the festival. They feature some of our most highly anticipated films and we almost always have talent there whether it's the filmmaker or someone associated with the film. They also always come with an event or a party," says Greenblatt. "We tell people to come ready for a fun, interesting, engaging evening. One of my favorite things about our Festival, and really almost any film festival, is to go to those films where the filmmakers are present and to really go beyond just watching the film passively — to really have that type of engagement to learn more about behind the scenes and what goes into it and speak with the filmmaker. I feel like that's what makes it really special."

The PFF also features curated packages to help guests sample films from different categories or help narrow down interests. Packages are available for purchase on the official website, Tickets/packages may also be purchased in person at the main Box Office at the Philadelphia Film Center, or over the phone at 215-422-4588. According to the release, as a bonus, the PFF will also offer complimentary tickets to all films in the "Made in USA" and "Non/Fiction" categories. Dates, times, and locations for each title are available online.

Mark Mulcahy on his compassionate album 'The Gus'

See the singer-songwriter this Thurs.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

Mark Mulcahy may have released one of the most meaningful political records of the year with his new album "The Gus". Not by presenting any answers or sloganeering, but by simply writing with the qualities of someone who actually listens to what his neighbors have to say instead of casting them aside.

In many ways, "The Gus" is a very different record than the one-time Miracle Legion and Polaris frontman has made in the past. Inspired by the writing of George Saunders, he decided to narrow his focus on smaller details of specific characters and their everyday lives. The recording process was also something he wished to change up from his usual routine, with a revolving cast of musicians from song-to-song including J. Mascis of Dinosaur Jr. showing up here and there.

"Typically, I would make a record to make a statement or to document where I am at that minute," says Mulcahy, over the phone. "It's 19 whatever, or 20 whatever and here it is. For this record, I worked a little harder than I normally do, I suppose."

Much like his last record, his 2017 opus, "The Possum in the Driveway", Mulcahy has delivered an album that takes on a focused and emotional arc in lieu of simply a collection of fleshed-out singles. The characters he outlines in "The Gus" represent everyday Americans acting out of desperation given their unfortunate circumstances. As a poignant and sympathetic writer, these character studies by Mulcahy show an understanding that this kind of desperation should not be confused with bad intentions. Maybe robbing a store will get you out of your dead-end town? Maybe voting for someone based on their promises will help shine a spotlight on a state that most people only fly over? There is a reason for the decisions people make, even if they end up doing more harm than good.

"I think most people are happy to disagree," says Mulcahy on the political approach of the new record. "I think it's just one end or the other that can't let anything go. In terms of writing about things, generally, I have a lot of songs about desperate people who you wouldn't necessarily think about having compassion for. At the same time, if somebody does something horrible, there's got to be some desperation. I've always wanted to write about that. I don't know how many times I've succeeded. It's easy to write about 'f--k you'. But I'm thinking about your end too."

Crafting the perfect sequence of "The Gus" was of the utmost importance to Mulcahy, as it is with all of his projects. But with this record, it seemed absolutely essential. After all, you wouldn't jump into a show midseason, would you?

"Because of the way I came up, the album is what I know," he explains. "Once I was having drinks with David Thomas of Pere Ubu, and he made this great speech about how the album as an art form. We were talking about shuffle and how people are not qualified to decide the order. Because I really put a lot of time into all of that stuff. I put a lot of time into side A and Side B. It's a struggle to figure everything out and make the best order you can. I would not want to give that up but at the same time, this is the world… One of the things that bugs me the most is when they play 'We Are the Champions' [by Queen on 'News of the World'] and they don't play that little bit after. If that doesn't come on, I'm stuck."

The opening track on the album, "Wicked World", ranks up with Mulcahy's most emotionally affecting songs and perhaps one of the most powerful opening tracks on an album you are bound to hear this year. It's the kind of tear-jerker only Mulcahy can really write. With Rainn Phoenix taking the second verse of the song and adding harmonies with Mulcahy, it hits you when you aren't looking and lays you to bed when you lose consciousness. I ask Mulcahy if he aims for the heartstrings with songs like this one, or if he surprises himself in the process.

"I don't really try. I don't have a plan or anything. It just happens that way. Somebody once told me, 'You were sent to make people cry.' Including myself! I played a gig at this festival in England, I was doing a song that I've done plenty of times and I was just weeping. People can tell because you can't sing anymore. It's obvious. I sort of apologized a little bit. But that's what it's supposed to do. It's the same for me as it is for you. I'm as much a listener as I am a maker."

Make sure to catch Mark Mulcahy at The Franklin Music Hall this Thursday October 17.

New $500 free cash offer: Bet on MVP

Go to FanDuel.com/Metro to grab the free cash.

MATT BURKE

Matt Burke is a veteran sports journalist and the Founder and Editor in Chief of MetroBet.

Before we get to NFL MVP betting, I should tell you about our new, exclusive $500 free cash offer.

Legal online sportsbooks are dishing out millions in free cash right now in an attempt to get sports bettors away from off-shore sites, and the most lucrative deal going at the moment comes via our affiliate partnership with FanDuel (available in PA and NJ).

Simply go to FanDuel.com/Metro and you can get up $500 in risk free cash.

The last time we glanced at NFL MVP in this space, Patrick Mahomes looked like he had it locked up. Only injury, we speculated at the time, could derail Mahomes' second straight MVP season.

Three straight games in which Mahomes has looked mortal (two of which the Chiefs lost), however, has opened the door for several other players to jump into the conversation.

Russell Wilson is the new darling as he has as many TD passes as Mahomes (14) and has remarkably not thrown an interception yet this season. You can get Mahomes and Wilson right now at FanDuel.com/Metro at +230.

Also going for Wilson is the fact that he hasn't won league MVP yet. Voters quickly experience voter-fatigue, so if this thing goes down to the wire and both Mahomes and Wilson have similar stats you better believe they'll give the nod to Mr. Ciara.

GETTY IMAGES

It's important to remember, though, how quickly the conversation changes week-to-week in the NFL.

Let's say, for example, Deshaun Watson (+550) continues to say hot and leads the Texans to four more wins in a row. He will immediately vault into the No. 1 spot.

Jimmy Garoppolo's stats aren't great, but if the 49ers continue to stay unbeaten he too will need to get some serious consideration. You can get Jimmy G at +2600 right now at FanDuel.com/Metro.

Christian McCaffrey is also darkhorse here at +1100 but you probably want to stay away. Only one running back has won MVP in the past 12 years (Adrian Peterson in 2012) but that was likely only because voters were painfully tired of giving the trophy to either Peyton Manning or Tom Brady at the time.

You also can probably cross off Carson Wentz, even if he has superb final stretch of the season. Wentz' passing yard totals just aren't there as he is already a good 600 yards behind Mahomes.

NFL Week 7 betting: Rams at Falcons

The Rams and Falcons are both looking to end extended losing streaks on Sunday at Mercedes-Benz Stadium. The former appears to be offering value in this spot.

Jared Goff is fresh off one of his worst games as a professional, going 13-of-24 for just 78 yards against the 49ers, but he's certainly capable of bouncing back as he goes from facing a top-five defense to Atlanta's bottom-five unit. The Falcons are allowing over 30 points per game and over six yards per play. The Rams are second in passing offense and sixth in yards per play this season, so expect them to put up points in a hurry.

L.A.'s defense has caught some flak over the past few weeks, but these stoppers are still 10th in yards allowed per play. They'll be tasked with stopping a one-dimensional Atlanta offense that sinks or swims on the arm of Matt Ryan. The Falcons have just two rushing TDs through six games, and none of those belong to Devonta Freeman.

GETTY IMAGES

The Rams have covered in each of their last five road games and are 7-2 against the spread in their last nine conference contests. Atlanta tends to let things snowball, as they're 2-7 against the spread in their last nine games following a spread loss.

Phils going for vet in manager search

Showalter, Girardi, Baker the favorites.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Joe Girardi will be interviewed by the Phillies. GETTY IMAGES

It seems as though Gabe Kapler's late firing didn't put the Philadelphia Phillies behind on the managerial search.

MLB Network's Jon Heyman reported on Tuesday morning that the Phillies "know what they want" and will be interviewing Joe Girardi, Dusty Baker, and Buck Showalter for the job.

The Phillies waited 11 days to fire Kapler following an 81-81 season that failed to live up to the expectations that came with the arrivals of Bryce Harper, J.T. Realmuto and Jean Segura.

In that week-plus span, the Phillies saw seven teams move on from their managers — making the buyer's market for skippers a crowded one.

While Joe Maddon is likely to join the Angels and Mike Matheny the Royals, no one else has made their move on the remaining big names that range from the Phillies' three interviewees to Carlos Beltran to Joe Espada.

Heyman's report reveals that the Phillies are looking for experience and experience only.

Girardi spent a decade managing the New York Yankees, handling the most prolific job in the game while making six trips to the postseason and winning a World Series in 2009.

He's the most successful of the Phillies' three targets.

Showalter has managed four teams over 20 seasons and made the playoffs just five times. Granted, he was managing a reloading Yankees team that was on the cusp of their mid-90s dynastic run, and small-market franchises in the Arizona Diamondbacks, Texas Rangers, and Baltimore Orioles.

Baker has 22 years of experience as an MLB manager while also managing four teams.

He made the postseason nine times — at least once with the San Francisco Giants, Chicago Cubs, Cincinnati Reds, and Washington Nationals — including the 2002 National League pennant with the Giants.

Flyers sign journeyman Stewart

Chris Stewart made his Flyers debut last night, the same day he signed with the team. GETTY IMAGES

The Philadelphia Flyers signed veteran forward Chris Stewart to a one-year, one-way contract worth $750,000 on Tuesday, the team announced prior to their game against the Colorado Avalanche.

The 32-year-old winger had been with the Flyers since training camp on a pro tryout.

"The journey is the destination!!" Stewart tweeted on Tuesday morning. "Thanks to all my family and friends that held me down during this whole process I'm truly blessed. Let's get it."

Stewart is a 10-year NHL veteran who has played with six different teams before his latest stop in Philadelphia.

He took quite a detour, though, as he spent last year playing in England with the Nottingham Panthers of the EIHL.

In 652 career NHL games, he has 160 goals and 161 assists (321 points). He eclipsed the 20-goal mark two times in his career — scoring 28 in two successive seasons with the Colorado Avalanche and St. Louis Blues between 2009-2011.

His ties to Flyers general manager Chuck Fletcher and assistant coach Mike Yeo opened the door for a return to North America. The three worked together for parts of three seasons with the Minnesota Wild.

Stewart is projected to be a 13th forward for the Flyers, which means plenty of nights spent in the press box as a healthy scratch. However, he made his Flyers debut on Tuesday night against the Avalanche.
